

Agenda: Thursday, June 6, 2013

Day one explores how the arts can develop communities with case studies of organizations that have successfully done so.

- 11:00 a.m. Pre-Program Workshop: "Mainstreaming Community Engagement" - Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Room 107
Doug Borwick, CEO, Arts Engaged

This workshop considers what community engagement is, how organizational functions can be re-imagined with a community engagement perspective, and present examples of deep engagement in the work of arts organizations. The most significant element will be a dialogue about how an engagement focus might be implemented in attendees' organizations.

- 1:30 p.m. Check-in – Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Lobby

- 2:00 p.m. Welcoming Remarks – Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Fitzgibbon Recital Hall

Lewis C. Ricci, Executive Director, Indiana Arts Commission

Lori Meadows, Executive Director, Kentucky Arts Council

Julie S. Henahan, Executive Director, Ohio Arts Council

- 2:10 p.m. Plenary Session: "Building Communities, Not Audiences" – Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Fitzgibbon Recital Hall
Doug Borwick, CEO, Arts Engaged

Arts-community partnerships are invaluable for both but are often "unnatural acts" and must be entered into with care. The arts and their communities represent for each other incredible potential for growth and enhanced vitality. The arts are a resource that communities cannot afford not to utilize; community partnerships represent the sustainable future for the arts.

- 3:00 p.m. Breakout Sessions: *Best Practice Case Studies in Community Arts

Choose a session that interests you. Sessions repeat at 4:30 p.m. and again at 10:15 a.m. on the second day.

- "Connecting with Communities" – Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Room 111
Doug Borwick, CEO, Arts Engaged
 This session focuses on relationship building techniques applicable to arts-community partnerships and pitfalls to avoid in the process. Note: This session is only offered on the first day.
- "Cultural Districts: BEAD" – Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Room 138
Miah Michaelsen, Assistant Economic Development Director for the Arts, City of Bloomington
 Hear about the genesis and development of the Bloomington Entertainment and Arts District (BEAD) in Bloomington, Indiana and get tips on how to think about cultural district development in your community.
- "Acid Park to Whirligig Park: A Small Town Recognizes its Arts Asset" - Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Room 105
Jenny Moore, Project Manager, Vollis Simpson Whirligig Park
 A discussion of how a small conservative rural city embraced arts-driven economic development through the Vollis Simpson Whirligig Park Project, a first-round ArtPlace grant recipient.
- "Developing Urban Arts and Culture Districts" - Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Room 106
Jeffrey A. Parks, President and Chief Quest Officer, ArtsQuest
 This session focuses on developing arts and culture districts for sustainable economic impact.
- "Arts Business Incubators / Hub for Neighborhood Revitalization" - Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Greiner Art Gallery
Tracy Taft, Executive Director, International Sonoran Desert Alliance (ISDA)
 This session focuses on the strategy of the ISDA to revitalize the whole Ajo, AZ town center through the arts. Central to their success is an approach to "incubating" artist businesses through facilities and programming.

- 4:15 p.m. Networking Break

- 4:30 p.m. Breakout Sessions: *Best Practice Case Studies in Community Arts
 (Repeat of 3:00 p.m. sessions; see descriptions above.)

Helen Davis Johnson, Arts & Culture Program Officer, The Kresge Foundation
 This presentation will explore what can be learned from strong national examples of creative placemaking, how this work can offer benefits to all stakeholders, what tools are needed to move the field forward, and the issues we should be aware of as more and more individuals, organizations and communities begin to engage in creative placemaking.
- 10:00 a.m. Networking Break
- 10:15 a.m. Breakout Sessions
 (Repeat of day one breakout sessions, with an additional session from Helen Davis Johnson.)
- “Creative Placemaking in American Cities” – Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Room 111
Helen Davis Johnson, Arts & Culture Program Officer, The Kresge Foundation
 The success of 21st century cities is deeply rooted in quality of place. Placemaking is not a new concept, but “Creative Placemaking” is a relatively young field that is quickly gaining enough traction to offer a great deal of promise for cities. This interactive session will explore some of the opportunities as well as challenges of creative placemaking in American cities.
- 11:30 a.m. “Community and the Arts” – Lynn Center for Fine Arts, Fitzgibbon Recital Hall
Elaine Fisher, President, efisher+associates
 In this session, attendees will begin to sharpen the planning in their own communities by learning the principles of the community planning processes, approaches to take, and stakeholders to involve. Ms. Fisher will explore the important tools and resources that may be available to your community, from collaborative agreements to artists’ collectives.
- 12:45 p.m. Lunch – Science Center, Atrium
- 2:15 p.m. Developing Your Plan – Science Center, Atrium
 Elaine Fisher will return to lead participants as they gather in community teams to start developing their plan through self-assessment, identification of potential resources within the community, and possible collaborations. The presenters will be available for questions and to assist with identifying next steps to develop their plan for a vibrant art community.
- 3:45 p.m. Closing Remarks – Science Center, Atrium
 Lewis C. Ricci, Executive Director, Indiana Arts Commission
